

PRIVACY STATEMENT

The Area Development Partnership (“ADP”) values you as a visitor to the ADP website or the websites of any of our programs (collectively the “ADP website”) and the privacy and security of your personal information. Our Privacy Statement reflects the ADP’s strong commitment to handling your personally identifiable information (“Personal Information”) in a safe and secure manner.

Personal Information is information which can be used to identify an individual. This includes information that is available publicly and information that is not generally available publicly, but may be provided by you when interacting with the ADP website and/or filling out registration forms accessible from the ADP website. This Personal Information includes, but is not limited to, the following: name, address, email address, telephone number, place of employment, title, computer IP address, ADP membership ID and classification, and payment information, such as credit card and bank account information.

The Personal Information collected is used by the ADP to facilitate registration for events, billing, to complete payment transactions, for identification and authentication of members, demographic sampling and other internal purposes by which ADP seeks to promote and improve its general operations. ADP membership lists are on occasion sold to or shared with ADP members. Personal Information is never sold or otherwise transferred to parties outside of the ADP membership, except: to our affiliated entities; to our service providers, such as our e-commerce transactions secure website provider ChamberMaster (<http://secure.chambermaster.com/login/>); our merchant service provider CyberSource (<http://www.cybersource.com/>); to non-ADP individuals submitting information or requests to ADP for response; to law enforcement agencies, in emergencies, for internal security matters, or when required by court order or search warrant; or when we have your permission.

Please note that any information posted to public areas, such as ADP’s social media pages, may be seen by other visitors.

ADP and its third party service providers use certain tools known as cookies to collect information about users browsing our website. Cookies are small text files that are stored on a visitor’s computer hard drive, and are used as a means of improving website performance, to provide customized viewing options, to compile statistical data on website activity and for security purposes. ADP also uses cookies to recognize previous visitors to our website and to pre-populate forms found on our website.

ADP does not knowingly collect information or use any Personal Information from visitors under 13 years of age. No information should be submitted to ADP by visitors under 13 years of age.

ADP provides links to third-party websites, but is not responsible for the manner in which those websites collect, use, secure and disclose information including Personal Information you may share with that website. You should review the privacy statements or policies of these third-party websites.

ADP reserves the right to amend this Privacy Statement at any time without notice. Any such amended Privacy Statement will be posted to the ADP website and replace the existing Privacy Statement.